An informant, believed to be reliable, advised that the Romanian National Committee was particularly interested in bringing together all of the good Romanian-American factions in the United States for the common good of Rumania and for the ultimate defeat of Communism in Rumania. The informant made reference to certain factions which were developing among the Rumanians and in particular, he indicated that there was a distinct faction supporting General Nicolae Radescu, the recently deposed head of the Romanian National Committee. He indicated that Radescu was strongly supported by Davila. . . . The informant indicated that the Committee was frequently consulted by the National Committee for Free Europe prior to the time of Radescu's break with the Romanian National Committee. Since that time, the National Committee for Free Europe has not consulted with the Romanian National Committee and has withdrawn its financial assistance. Those members of the Romanian National Committee who broke with the Committee are still supported by the National Committee for Free Europe. . . .
